Austin Duncan lives on Greenbrier river about two miles below Marlinton. For sometime a big wild turkey gobbler has beon flying over to his farm from the Big Ridge on Buckley Mountain and giving battle to the tame gobbler. One morning a week or two ago, the turkeys were heard challenging each other, aad soon the wild one put in his appearance. Hr. Duncan went out to see the fun. The wild one made a face, and the tame turkey knocked him about ten feet. He lit a fighting but saw the man and started for the woods. The tame turkey gave a triumphant gobble, and back at him came the wild bird. Then they went at it in earnest, and so engrossed were they in the combat that Mr. Duncan was able to go up behind the wild turkey and catch him by the wings. He was in poor condition, but he weighed 31 pounds nevertheless. Mr. Duncan kept him in a pen all day and then turned him loose. We have not heard whether he ever returned or not.

Korea. will speak at the Presbyterian Church. Miss Graham comes to us highly recommended as an interesting speaker. This is a great opportvnity for the people of Marlinton to hear about the work in this far away land.

Stock in the Pocahontas County Fair has been sold to the amount of eleven thousand dollars, and there are a number of persons yet to see. In order to have the stock held by as many persons as possible, sales have been limited to ten shares to an individual. There are a number of persons who were willing to take more than ten shares, but they were put off until everyone had an opportunity to get in. Three car loads of tile are being unloaded this week, to be used on the Fair grounds, and as soon as corn planting is over, A. C. Barlow expects to put a lot of men and teams to building the race track.

GREENBANK

We are having fine growing weather and making garden, planting corn and potatoes is the order of our farmers.

Prof. C. E. Flynn, of Durbin, was here last week. He is laying up the rails for a clean sweep into the county Superintendent chair this fall. He is a good man for the position.

Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Arbogast will leave soon for Charlotsville, Va., where they will make their home.

E. F. Arbogast and family have rented the C. O. Arbogast property and will move there soon.

J. Hamed has moved his goods to the new store building on the corner of main street.

Clarence A. Sheets is doing a good business in the garage at this place.

Wm. Geiger is painting his garage on main street.

W. A. Gladwell's team ran away last Friday. No one was hurt.

"DON'T WORRY"---JOHN D.

John D. Rockefeller is 83, thrifty of speech, mentally vigorous and physically fit, and by no means discouraged about the world. "Don't worry," says he, "the darkness is only temporary, and the world is coming out of it all right." Was the younger generation weaker in fiber than his, somebody asked him. "It is in this younger generation," said the oil king, "to succeed just as much as it was in my generation and the generation beyond that. The world today offers better opportunities than ever before. Let the young and ambitious work hard and look forward and they will succeed." Pearls of wisdom are not cast before swine.

That old wagon, buggy, farm machine or automobile may be a bad wreck but Charley and Vincy Dilley can make them good again.

You know Charley, "The Famous Village Blacksmith." He and his son, Vincey, the nation's army Truck Driver, have opened up the most up to date repair shop in the county at The Peoples Shop at the west end of the County Bridge, Marlinton, W. Va.

TAXATION

"Taxation, without representation is Tyrany," said one of our greatest statesmen.

"Freedom of speech and freedom of the press shall not be denied to any citizen" is what our constitution declares, and what I am going to say may not appeal to some people, but they are undeniable facts. Our taxes are high and still going higher. Why? Simply because we have a bunch of high salaried officers paid more now than they deserve, and who are still clamoring for more. Look, if you please, what it costs the taxpayers of this little mountain state of ours to mantain her government. Take for instance the salaries of the officers from the Governor, down. It represents a rediculous sum of money: do the people get value received? NO! Seventy-five per cent would pay them well for all they do. Consequently the people would be relieved of apart of their taxes if the salaries were cut twenty-five per cent, and that is what I favor.

Just a word in regard to our new assessment. This is an old farce, "raise the valuation and lower the percent."

We have had experience of this kind in the past; these sayings have proven to be untrue. I have no faith in it. I do not favor the new tax system simply because the law provides that land must be assessed at the price that it was last sold for. Possibly it was sold during the war period when prices were inflated. So the assessment of that land would not be fair and equitable at that kind of price today.

The people have no say as to how their money is to be spent; is that not tyrany? To be sure it is.

I would suggest that the taxpayers hold a meeting at an early date to discuss the situation and to formulate plans whereby our taxes may be lowered.

pearance that ran to wildness, and made it plain that we had led a wild life.

As far as we are able to figure out the first step that was taken in West Virginia to curtail the liberties of the forest, was in a bill introduced by a Wooddell from Pocahontas County, and which was passed in 1872. The law is still on the statute books but it is in practice a law more honored in the breach than in the observance. and that is the statute making it an offense to dig ginseng or other medical roots upon the lands of another, or to prospect for the same, without the consent of the owner or owners thereof first had and obtained. And a conviction carries a fine and in the discretion of the court a jail sentence not exceeding two months. It is fifty years old but we have yet to hear of a prosecution or a conviction under this law. Some forty years ago, the development of the Tug River coal fields cast a large nomadic population upon these mountains, together with those who moved out in the Hatfield-development of the Tug River coal fields cast a large nomadic population upon these mountains, together with those who moved out in the Hatfield-McCoy feud, and these people largely lived on game and fish, and enjoyed an income by the sale of ginseng, and from that time the game and fish have steadily diminished. We can remember the sangers very well. Families would emerge from the woods on the way to the store with a bag of sang. All had the forest pallor on them showing that they had not been exposed to the sun, and they carried a few cooking utensils and a sang hoe, which looked something like a golf putter.

About all we saw of the Wild Life League was the banquet and it was a big one. The city people still hang on to the banquet without which they do not seem to be able to make up their minds. It used to be mostly a case of the flowing bowl, and a big drunk. They were easily entertained. The drinks were superb, and

About all we saw of the Wild Life League was the banquet and it was a big one. The city people still hang on to the banquet without which they do not seem to be able to make up their minds. It used to be mostly a case of the flowing bowl, and a big drunk. They were easily entertained. The drinks were superb, and the food was indifferent. The old Scotchman asked his guest if he was a teetotaller, and when the man said that he was not, then the host said that being the case he would be contented with water and would not have to have ginger ale or lemonade or some such drink. So that may be the reason that at the modern banquet the main drink is water, with perhaps a cup of coffee at the end of the meal.

And there is another difference. In the old days they started about nine

r ten o'clock at night and kept it p until daylight and it was custo-ıary to make a night of it. And ome were at the table and some were nder it. Now they gather at six 'clock or some such matter and eat hearty supper of good food, drink heir little old cup of coffee, listen vith polite attention to a few feeble peeches, and yawn, arise, and go ome to bed, and the next day they an do as much work as ever, and heir lives have not been shortened nd their days saddened by indulgence in alcoholic poison. It is much etter for them and for humanity.

The banquet the other night at Clarksburg, was one of the biggest hat we ever attended, and they had a powerful good feed, and were able o smile perceptibly after eating it.

wild life by ordering reindeer meat from Alaska, and ramps from Webster county.

The ramp is a native of the rich woods in our part of the State, and it is a noted antiscorbutic. In the old days when the scurvy threatened, these early green shoots were of great value to the wilderness dwellers In appearance it is a dainty lily, but at the same time it is a powerful medicine. It exudes from the pores of the skins, and a city dweller said at the banquet that night that on the trains on the Greenbrier valley that at this time of year they set apart a special car like a smoking car for the accommodation of ramp eaters. We have no prejudices against the ramp and so we took it to our bosom and claimed it as a rare exotic from our native land, a lily from home, lost in a great city. Besides we were talking to a crowd composed of rampeaters and the descendants of rampeaters.

There is only one place where the ramp shames us before company, and rampeaters.

There is only one place where the ramp shames us before company, and that is when the cows have been grazing in the rich woods and eatan of this succulent and nutritious annual. Then it may that with a taste somewhat destroyed by the use of the ramp, rampy milk or rampy butter, may be set before a guest who has not been properly attuned by use to endure it. There is nothing so repulsive to the tenderfoot visitor as rampy milk. To use a vivid illustration, it has a tendency to make a person throw up his toe nails. But they say that if the old cow is brought in from the woods and penned in a cow lot for some hours before she i milked, and digestion allowed to wait on appetite, and health on both, that the milk then obtained is sweet and good, and not the horror that it is when it is prematurely ripped from the inside of the cow.

The learned clerk who reported the banquet for one of the daily papers asserted that we entertained the diners with fifteen minutes of rare Pocahontas humor, which was about all that he knew about it, for while dinners with fifteen minutes of rare Pocahontas humor, which was about all that he knew about it, for while we do not remember all that we said, we do remember that we helped ourselves pretty liberally from Mark Twain, Stephen Leacock, Daniel Webster, Coke, and others, not to say anything about one ripping wheeze from "If Winter Comes," and if that is Pocahontas humor, they can make the best of it. You know a person in a strange land talking like a scared rabbit to a big crowd cannot always hold up two fingers on each hand to indicate quotations, even if he is as honest as the day is long. And you cannot do it even if you are writing for print without making a nuisance out of your self. That is a "foregone conclusion." (Shakespeare, Othello, Act 3, scene 3.)

It is like the time that they got out the search warrant in the old days on suspicion that a prominent colored citizen had stolen and carried away certain goods. As they searched the house and premises, the suspected man aided them and carried on a rapid commentary as they examout the search warrant in the old days on suspicion that a prominent colored citizen had stolen and carried away certain goods. As they searched the house and premises, the suspected man aided them and carried on a rapid commentary as they examined the various articles. "Gentlemen, you don't want to bother them lines. I stole them from Mr. A. I stole that hoe from Mr. B. I stole this here swingle-tree from Mr. C. And that axe, it belong to Mr. D. You all aint got nothing to do with any of my things." Or something like that. And the officers found nothing incriminating.

The position that we take that until we steal some Clarksburg humor, that the venue of our offense lieth not in Harrison County.

Years ago The Pocahontas Times had a voluminous contributor in a talented Englishman who could turn out copy like a threshing machine throws out straw, and his copy was absolutely polluted with quotation marks. There was not enough quotation marks in all Pocahontas county to set up his shortest article. He was so honest that he could not say that it was a "fine day," without putting the beastly marks around it simply because some one else had used the expression some other time. So we did not order some pounds of quotation marks. We ignored them and since then we have stolen "right and left," "high and low," "far and near," and it was a matter of considerable comfort to find out that Murk Twain did the same with any expression that was common property that he needed to use.

We remember telling one thing of a local nature that seemed to strike the audience with some force, as this was a bunch of sports that wanted all the game and fish preserved at least until they had a chance to arrive. And it was true too. In every country community where fishing is to be had there are certain landowners who have put up signs for years forbidding tresspassers to go on their lands by hunting and fishing. In every country community where fishing is to be had there are certain landowners who have put up signs for years forbidding tresspassers to go on their lands by hunting and fishing. We have not got the nerve to do that ourself, but we have not led the independent life of a farmer for lo these many years. With the farmer it is just the case of "God and me." So they tell the world to keep off. Under the new law the commission can close certain streams against all fishing, and that applies to the landowner as well as to the public generaliy, and what they have done to the fishing streams of this county is a plenty. And at the last court we passed a group of farmers and overheard a single remark and that made by a man who was noted for his signs and thunders in the days gone by. He remarked sadly; "They have fixed the law so that a man cannot fish on his own land" And that is a fact. He does not have to put up signs. The State does that for him. We lowed it to him.

The Wild Lifers have undertaken a plenty. What goes on in the woods is past finding out as a general thing. But it does seem that there has come a change over the spirit of the country. Thirty years ago custom decreed it, that it was not wrong to break a game law, and that the only thing required in West Virginia was that you paid the fine if you were found out. That it was a natural business risk that every man took if he killed deer out of season. He should step up and settle promptly, and that was the end of that. He suffered no ignominy. It was not an oboxious crime. That is being chang ed now. More and more the good people of the communities are becom ing more punctilious about the game and fish laws, and the time will soon come when this law must be obeyed or the offender will lose cast, and then the law will be in full force and effect.

We struck a book the other day called "The Eye of the Wift" That is an obscure title. The word wift is the same as our word withe, and the eye is the knot in the withe where it meets around a bundle of poles. Therefore the book is about what the eye of the withe might have seen when it lay in the woods. And that tas been about the only sort of an eye that has been turned on the doings in the woods.

And no part of the State is quite so vitally interested as Pocahontas county. We have the greatest playground in the United States. We ought to keep it in good order.

Another difference in a banquet of today and the banquet of the past is that formerly the banqueter was drunk and dressed up. Now he is neither. In the old days when a banquet was set for a certain day and time, the mountaineer had to lug a black suit of a peculiar cut with him and parade it at the banquet. Judge Robinson lifted the vail for a moment to refer to the conference of the five Supreme Court Judges, at the time that the case came up some ten or more years ago when a coal company had been convicted of polluting a stream by allowing drainage from the mine to enter it. He said that Judge Brannon remarked that one statute required the mines to be drained, and the other that the stream should not be polluted, and that he did not see how a mine could be drained unless it was drained into some running water. But after a discussion it was found that the law applied to coal companies as well as to lesser mortals, and the law was so construed and the conviction was sustained. But after a discussion it was found that the law applied to coal companies as well as to lesser mortals, and the law was so construed and the conviction was sustained. Whereupon the legislature promptly changed the law so the coal companies are not so helpless. We can remember the occasion when the drainnge question came up, and how the earth trembled. But it was soon over. We Wild Lifers have to work in pretty narrow limitations, for we cannot make the State desolate and call it perfect. It is a case of compromise.

Where the Wild Lifer is being effective is in kuklexing about and asking fishermen and hunters if they have a license, and this has resulted in much good in the way of contributions to the game and fish funds that arise from the license fees.

But here we are still at the banquet. No progress made towards home. Out of the vasty deep of past days comes an expression something like this. "He went to a banquet and anchored there!"

DEATH OF MRS. ELIZABETH A. GIBSON

On Thursday, March 9th, shortly afternoon, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Gibson died suddenly and peacefully at her home in Monterey. While in failing health for some time, Mrs. Gibson was active and in full possession of her mind to the time of her death. Death was due to appolexy, and came after only a few moments warning.

This worthy lady's parents were Joseph Seybert and Mrs. Rebecca Seybert, of Pocahontas county, W. Va. She had two brothers—Lanty and Jacob Seybert. Lanty died a prisoner of war at Elmira, N Y. Jacob married Miss Mary Jones, of Greenbrier County, and became a prosperous citizen of Rockbridge county, and was father of Mr Trent Seybert and Mrs Mame Newland, of that county. Mrs. Gibson had but one sister, the late Mrs. Maria Herold near Frost, W Va.

Mrs. Gibson spent much of her girlhood days at the home of her grand-father, Mr. Lanty Lockridge. at Driscol, four miles west of Huntersville, a home noted for hospitality and a place of resort for visiting lawyers to and from Huntersville on public occasions.

Mrs. Gibson received her education at the Richardson School for girls,

Mrs. Gibson spent much of her girlhood days at the home of her grand-father, Mr. Lanty Lockridge. at Driscol, four miles west of Huntersville, a home noted for hospitality and a place of resort for visiting lawyers to and from Huntersville on public occasions.

Mrs. Gibson received her education at the Richardson School for girls, then conducted at Warm Springs.

She was born near Seebert, Pocahontas county, November 15, 1837, and at the time of her death was 84 years, 3 months and 24 days old. She was married to the late Wm. D Gibson, in 1859, and the family home up to the time of her husband's death was between Monterey and Vanderpool. The closing years of her life were spent in Monterey, where she has made a wide circle of friends.

Kemper Gibson, her youngest son, pleasantly remembered by our people, died several years ago. Joseph S. Gibson, of Monterey, and Wm. A. of Charlottesville, are the two living sons. The daughters are Miss Kate and Miss Clara Gibson, at home, Mrs John M. Colaw, of Monterey, and Mrs. D. M. Kyle, of Staunton.

Mrs. Gibson had been a member of the Presbyterian church for many years. She was a woman of strong character and unusual mental endowments. Her mind was richly stored with reminiscences of the past, and she kept herself well informed in all current matters up to the last. Confided in and respected by her large circle of friends, honored and loved by her childred, and possessed of all the graces of the good Christian mother, she rounded out a long and useful life, full of kindly deeds and John S. Jackson died at the home of his brother-in-law, W. H. Cackley, in this city, on Tuesday morning, March 14, 1922, aged 79 years and two days. He had been in failing health for some months. Mr. Jackson had been a resident of the city for about eleven years and was well-known and liked on account of his kind disposition. He was born in Highland county, Va., but spent most of his life in Pocahontas county. He was a brave Confederate soldier, serving in Company F, 19th Virginia Cavalry, under Captain M. L. McNeel- Mr. Jackson is survived by four full brothers, S. L. and A. H. Jackson, of this city, and W. K. and E. H. Jackson, of Cass, and two half brothers, also by three sisters and one half sister. After funeral services at the home of his sister, Mrs. W. H. Cackley, at four o'clock on Wednesday afternoon his body was laid to rest in Riverview cemetery. Rev. W. C. Sponaugle and Rev. R. Ernest Campbell has been dragging it all winter.

Several of our nearby citizens went down to Marlinton Tuesday to visit the Court.

Hunter Adams finally got all his scrap iron together and he rides around in it anyway.

My dear Ellen;

I concluded to write you a few lines to day as I have to go on picket tomorrow and it may be Henry Hull will start home before I come back.

The first day I left home we went to McDowel, next day to Buffalow Gap, and next morning to Staunton by day light, but the cars were gone and we had to lay over until next day. The fourth day we got to Charlottsville where we had

as the cars which were coming up tore the track up and we had to wait until it was fixed. Fifth day to Gordensville and sixth to the army.

My feet got very sore. blistered in several places. and it was hard to get enough to eat as they charged five dollars a meal from Staunton east, and that I could not afford. I did not spend ten dollars as I came down.

I have had my health very well since I came here, and plenty to eat so far The Yankees have been raiding around on both sides of us and some fighting done, and some Yankees captured, but this Brigade has been laying still. It is reported that the Yanks have been in Pocahontas and Highland. What become of P. Bruffey's neck tie? I have not got it here.

We had orders to get ready to move yesterday but were countermanded in the evening. If Henry Hull gives you a call you must fix a pitcher of cider for him and a good meal of victuals. Tell mother I would like very much to have that cake of butter now, and if she pleases to send it by Henry Hull.

How are you getting along? How is your wood holding out?

We have had preaching here twice today. There will be a meeting of some sort every day. Give my love to all my friends, write to me by every chance, be certain to write by Henry Hull.

Nothing more, but remaining your loving husband,

Our friend, Alf Taylor, of Fayette County, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the Sixth District composed of the counties of Boone, Fayette, Kanawha Greenbrier, Pocahontas and Raleigh county. He is an old time editor and publisher, and at present prints the "Pick and Shovel," down in Fayette County. He has poverty and honesty to recommend him, and if the poor and honest people get behind him his nomination and election are assured. In the election of 1920 he weathered the Republican tidal wave, and was elected to the House of Delegates from Fayette county on the Democratic ticket. He has the peculiar distinction of having answered every roll call at the last session of the Legislature and voting no every proposition to spend money. he weathered the Republican tidal wave, and was elected to the House of Delegates from Fayette county on the Democratic ticket. He has the peculiar distinction of having answered every roll call at the last session of the Legislature and voting no every proposition to spend money. Somehow or other, he got the strange idea in his head that the way to lower taxes is to reduce expenses. If the rest had voted as he did against extravagant expenditures, increased salaries of elective State and county officers, and the creation of new offices to reward party service in the face of deflated values, it would not have been necessary to increase the assessments of the farms to meet the running expenses of the State.

Your Farm

Does it pay you a fair interest, upkeep, taxes and a decent wage? Are you still trying with your hands to put the western farmers' modern machinery out of business and are you satisfied? If so don't read this, hand it to your neighbor. But don't forget we trade farms for city property and city property for farms. In fact, we trade for anything of real value anywhere in West Virginia, but of all our large holdings we like Morgantown the best, because its Real Estate is growing the fastest of any in the state and it has the most dependable labor market. Write us and let's get acquainted.
